

What are reasonable adjustments?

Reasonable adjustments are actions that support students with disability to take part in education in a similar way to their peers.

They can be:

- People (e.g., support staff)
- Materials (e.g., screen reader)
- Changes in how things are done (e.g., rest breaks).

The Disability Standards for Education 2005 (DSE) explain the rights of students with disability and what education providers must do to support students with disability.

Reasonable adjustments are a key part of making sure students get these rights. For example, a reasonable adjustment could be a student who is sensitive to sound uses a pair of ear protectors in class to focus on an activity.

To learn more, scan the QR code or visit:

www.education.gov.au/disability-standards-education-2005/students.