What is going to make you attractive to an employer so that they will want to employ you rather than some one else? Often it is your transferable skills.

You have identified personal qualities and seen how they fit a number of different jobs. When you are deciding your career path, look at your skills and abilities to find the best fit for you rather than being influenced by traditional job roles.

Think back to your dream job and identify two skills that could be used in that job.

What was your dream job that you identified on page 18? _____

Skill # 1:

How will this skill help you in your dream job?

Skill # 2:

How will this skill help you in your dream job?

In a small group try and come up with a list of skills that you have developed that are needed in the workplace. A couple have been listed to start you off.

- Being able to do things without being told (working independently)
- Accountability

Many of the skills you learn at school are also skills that a boss will want you to have in the workplace.

Every activity you engage in (whether that be part time work, sport or a youth group), will give you skills that will help you in the workplace.

These are called transferable skills.
